Welcome to the end of summer! While we may be wrapping up all the great summer activities in our parks, facilities, and pools, there's still much to look forward to.

The City will be offering our first Neighborhood Beer Gardens later this month. Thursday, August 17 through Sunday, August 20, the Beer Garden will be in beautiful Rivers Crossing Park. Thursday, August 24 through Sunday, August 27, it will be at Bethesda Park along the Fox River. Stop by for "Bier, Freunde, und Fun!" Sprecher products will be offered along with food and music all weekend long.

Earn your beer by signing up to take part in the Wurst Beer Biathlon taking place at each of the Neighborhood Beer Garden stops. At the Saturday Neighborhood Beer Gardens, city officials will also be there to answer questions from 1:00-3:00 pm or just to chat. Hope to see you there!

The beer gardens are smaller celebrations leading up to the 2nd Annual Waukesha Oktoberfest in Frame Park, Friday and Saturday, September 22 and 23. Music, dancing, food, and fun for the whole family will fill Frame Park.

And before I forget, we'll wrap up the Tribute Tuesday season with a tribute to country singer, Kenny Chesney on Tuesday, September 12 in Cutler Park. The concert will also be the kick-off to Waukesha Reads. We will have free books and special activities for children.

Right around the corner is Halloween. Trick-or-Treat will take place on October 31 from 5:00-7:00 pm in Waukesha. Bring the younger children to Howl-O-Ween on Friday, October 13 taking place at Retzer Nature Center. It's a great time for children, 10 and under, to enjoy an "un-haunted" Halloween with crafts, hikes, games, and a dance.

Sincerely, Shawn Reilly, Mayor, City of Waukesha

MISC

Welcome to another Branching Out. I hope your summer is going well and with all the rain we have been experiencing I'm sure your landscape is thriving and growing more than ever. Forestry crews have just recently completed our street tree planting program and are also continuing our ash tree removals of the unprotected and declining ash trees. As I cruise through the city looking at our trees, I am reminded of the time of year it must be, mid-summer. This is when we start seeing the emergence of the adult Japanese Beetle and the impact it has on our landscape. Leaves of preferred trees and shrubs are experiencing holes as these beetles feed on them. Beetles typically start their feeding in the upper canopy of trees and then work their way down. Adult beetles feed on the soft tissue of the leaves, which is in between the veins of the leaf, leaving a lace-like skeleton of the leaf. The upper canopy of these trees may start turning brown as defoliation increases. Younger trees are impacted more than larger trees, as total defoliation of the entire tree is more likely because of its smaller canopy. Therefore, defoliation may occur within only a few days.

Japanese Beetle adults are less than a half inch long and are easily seen perched on the leaves and flying around the canopy. They are round shaped, metallic green with white dots around their sides and back.

They are strong fliers and when a small tree or branch is shaken they are easily seen flying around the canopy. Forestry crews have seen the beetle's presence on both linden and elm trees. These seem to be their preferred species on the street but they don't stop there. Norway and Japanese maple, birch, crab apple, purple leaf plum and mountain ash are also on their hit list. Over 350 species of plants including roses, various shrubs, flowers and weeds can be affected by this insect. Turf is also affected, during the larval stage, as a white grub feeding on the lawn's roots.

As stated earlier, effects of the Japanese Beetle are more important on smaller more susceptible trees and shrubs and therefore control options, if any, should be considered. Physical control and trapping of the adult beetle may be an option for some but the use of pheromones, or scent attractors, to lure the beetle into the trap should be avoided because this consequently attracts more beetles from the surrounding area into your landscape. Physically knocking them off into a bucket of soapy water will take care of them, but this will have to be repeated after new beetles fly in. There are various chemical controls on the market which can be used, but always read the instructions and apply accordingly. Remember to avoid using insecticides on plants when they are flowering to avoid harm to honey bees, which may also be attracted to the plant.

I hope this information is helpful and useful to you. I'm sorry for all the doom and gloom but maybe this will shed some light on things you are seeing in your landscape as you enjoy the rest of your summer. - Dave Rauterberg, City Forester
